BOSTON: THE AFTERMATH

More from Boston

» Lawmakers asked Sunday why the FBI had failed to spot the danger from Tamerlan Tsarnaev during a 2011 interview, and they complained it was just one of a series of cases in which someone the agency had investigated later had taken part in attacks.

» A police officer shot and wounded while pursuing the marathon bombing suspects Friday had to be resuscitated after his heart stopped and he lost his entire blood supply, but doctors and relatives on Sunday said he was emerging from sedation and expected to recover.

» "We must be people of reconciliation and not revenge," Roman Catholic Cardinal Sean O'Malley told a packed Cathedral of the Holy Cross during Sunday services. "The crimes of the two young men must not be justification for violence against Muslims."

Bombing suspect under guard awaiting charges

Reuters

BOSTON Federal prosecutors prepared criminal charges Sunday against the 19-year-old suspect in the Boston Marathon bombings who was seriously wounded, unable to speak and under heavy guard at a city hospital two days after his dramatic capture.

Investigators could not interview Dzhokhar Tsarnaev as they searched for clues to what may have driven him and his brother, ethnic Chechens who came to the U.S. 10 years ago, to plant the bombs, and whether anyone else was involved.

Receiving particular scrutiny was a six-month trip the brother, Tamerlan Tsarnaev, took to Russia in January 2012, and whether he was influenced by Chechen separatists or the Islamist struggle against the West.

Tamerlan Tsarnaev, 26, died after a Thursday night shootout with police that left behind some 250 spent shells on the streets of Watertown, the Boston suburb where police finally cornered Dzhokhar Tsarnaev, 19, after a massive manhunt that shut down greater Boston on Friday.

U.S. Attorney Carmen Ortiz, the federal prosecutor for the Boston area, was preparing criminal charges, according to Boston Police Commissioner Ed Davis. It was not clear when charges would be filed.

Davis said earlier that police discovered at least four unexploded devices, including one similar to the two pressure cooker bombs packed with nails and ball bearings used in the twin blasts Monday that killed three people and wounded more than 170 near the finish line of the Boston Marathon.

The men's parents, who moved back to southern Russia, have said their sons were framed.

Tsarnaev was shot in the throat, Sen. Dan Coats, a member of the Intelligence Committee, told ABC. A source close to the investigation told Reuters that Tsarnaev had tongue damage.

"We don't know if we'll ever be able to question the individual," Boston Mayor Thomas Menino said Sunday on ABC's "This Week."

Amputees face costly, arduous recoveries

Los Angeles Times

BOSTON U.S. Rep. Tammy Duckworth (D-Ill.) still remembers the anger she felt when well-wishers offered encouragement after she lost both legs when her helicopter was shot down over Iraq in 2004.

"I thought, 'How the heck is my life ever going to get back to normal?' " she recalled.

But Duckworth did recover, thanks in part to major medical and therapeutic advances. She has run in three marathons, earned a new pilot's license and, last year, won a seat representing Illinois in Congress. "I have done things I never dreamed of doing," she said.

The victims of Monday's Boston bombings now face similar challenges; at least 13 confront futures with lost or maimed limbs. Their recoveries will be long and arduous, experts say.

For many of the injured, even those who have health insurance, the process also may be costly. Insurance plans often restrict coverage for therapy and prosthetics.

At the end of the week, several dozen bomb victims remained in hospitals, including two who lost more than one limb.

Once rehabilitation begins, many patients will confront the frustrations of adapting to life without a foot or a leg. Depression is common.

"They also have to try to process what their life is going to be like now," said Dr. Paul F. Pasquina, who headed the rehabilitation program at Walter Reed National Military Medical Center.

Families and friends of the injured in Boston already are setting up funds to help defray medical bills.

Liz Harlan, whose friend Erika Brannock lost her left leg and seriously injured her right in the blast, is helping raise money so Brannock can remain on her health plan, which she is scheduled to lose when her teaching job ends in June. "We don't know how soon Erika is going to be able to work," Harlan said.

Texting sends a bad message

Molly Fedick

To the men of Chicago: Stop texting women!

I know, calling a girl sounds more terrifying than getting a prostate exam from Carrot Top. And for the half of you who aren't afraid but simply lazy, fine. But it's time for change.

Today, I urge girls everywhere to embrace the hashtag #girlsagainsttexting. This is not a joke or a suggestion. This is an order. We as a gender must reclaim the power that technology has stolen from us. I want this hashtag trending until every man in Chicago realizes we no longer will put up with the communication equivalent of wearing a sweatsuit to the airport.

I know this might make some women nervous—texting often is our main form of communication. But let me assure you, refusing to text will weed out every guy who has put you on his back burner.

Think about it: Men use texting as a way to string you along and keep you as an "option." Ever wonder why Friday rolls around and you get a text at 8:48 p.m. asking, "What are you up to?" It's because he knows he doesn't have to take you on a date; you will restructure your night around him when and if he decides to see you.

Here's the harsh reality: Guys will put forth the least amount of effort required to get the desired result and often are texting several girls at a time. If you're getting weekend texts to meet up, you're an option, not a priority.

Now, let's say you ignore that text. He will wonder. His wonder will turn to panic. That panic—if he really likes you—eventually will turn into a phone call to make sure you're not dead. Suddenly, you're not on the back burner because getting in touch with you required effort.

Somehow women understand this concept in every area of our lives but our relationships. Which would you value more, a free shirt or a shirt you saved up to buy? Sure, the free shirt is perfectly good—in fact, it's always an option if you're out of clean clothes. But damn, don't you love that shirt you saved up for? You want to wear it all the time, show it off and dry clean it. The free shirt? You didn't do much to get it, and it's completely replaceable.

I know what every guy is thinking: "If she doesn't respond to my text, I'll assume she doesn't like me and move on." That's BS. Many marriages are the result of a man who, if taken to court, could have qualified as a stalker at the beginning of the relationship. When a man really wants a woman, he will stop at nothing.

Obviously, the elimination of texting will be an adjustment for women, which is why I allow one response to a guy via text. Tell him you gave up texting everyone for Lent and that in your religion, Lent lasts all year. Or send a text back that looks like this: "sujtjrry ktdffbotrd nbroken cafgll me." Or just tell him you're "not really into texting." Leave it that. He'll call.

You will be amazed by the results. Suddenly, you'll have advance plans and dates galore. You'll never wonder when you'll hear from him next. You will experience unintended results like unchipped manicures and more time to devote to "Candy Crush." Oh, the possibilities!

Sorry, guys. Playtime is over.

REALITY CHECK

HOW DOES CHICAGO'S HOMICIDE RATE COMPARE WITH OTHER MAJOR U.S. CITIES?

CHICAGO VIOLENCE
ONE CITY UNDER THE GUN

By Tracy Swartz | REDEYE

Chicago last year recorded the most homicides of any U.S. city—515 killings—but it did not have the highest homicide rate, a RedEye analysis of police data found.

Chicago has a higher total number of homicides and a higher homicide rate than New York and L.A., which have more residents, but other cities, including Detroit and Kansas City, beat Chicago in terms of rate. A homicide rate takes into account the total number of homicides within city limits as well as the city's population.

Still, Chicago gained a reputation as a murder capital last year, when it saw about 19 homicides for every 100,000 residents. Philadelphia recorded 21.5 homicides last year for every 100,000 residents while St. Louis recorded 35.5 homicides for every 100,000 residents.

Arthur Lurigio, a professor of psychology and criminal justice at Loyola University Chicago, said people tend to look at the total number of homicides and not consider the city's population.

He said Chicagoans also tend to compare themselves to New York and L.A., which both recorded fewer homicides last year despite having a higher population than Chicago.

"People don't really understand statistics intuitively," Lurigio said. "Over a few years, Chicago has been relatively safe compared to St. Louis, Detroit, Flint [Mich.], Newark [N.J.], Baltimore, New Orleans. All of those cities have had higher murder rates, but Chicago has been getting all of the publicity because the absolute numbers have been higher."

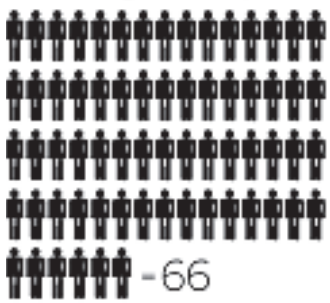

Still, Chicago's homicide rate continues to improve compared to last year. The city logged 15 homicides in

FIVE MOST POPULOUS U.S. CITIES

1. NEW YORK

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
8.24 million

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

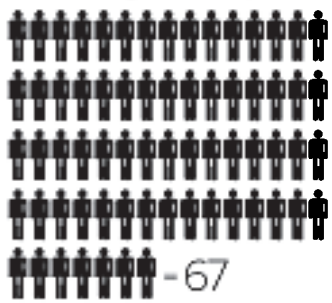

New York made headlines last year for cutting its 2012 homicide total to 418 deaths, a 50-year low. America's largest city recorded 515 killings in 2011. The decline continues into this year, as the city saw 28 fewer homicides in the first three months of 2013 than over the same period in 2012, resulting in a 29.8 percent decrease.

2. LOS ANGELES

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
3.81 million

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

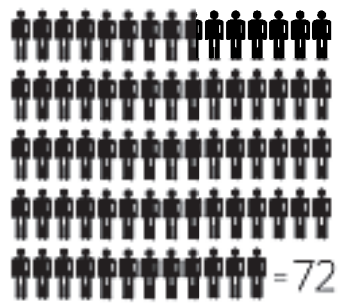

L.A. recorded 298 homicides in 2012, an increase of one homicide from 2011, the Los Angeles Times reported. The city saw fewer than 300 homicides for three straight years. L.A. recorded 75 homicides in the first three months of last year.

3. CHICAGO

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
2.70 million

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

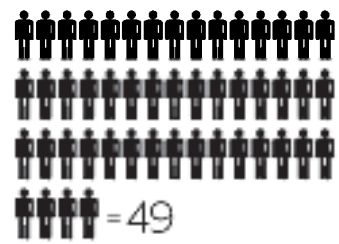

After seeing the worst January in 10 years for homicides, Chicago logged record lows in February and March. Homicides were down 40 percent in the first three months of this year compared with the same period last year.

4. HOUSTON

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
2.14 million

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

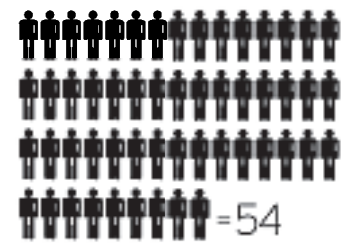

Houston saw 216 homicides in 2012, a 9 percent increase from 2011, according to reports. The 2012 homicide toll was the second-lowest number of homicides in Houston since 1966. Houston has seen 49 homicides this year through March, down from 56 homicides during the same period last year, according to unofficial numbers from Houston police.

5. PHILADELPHIA

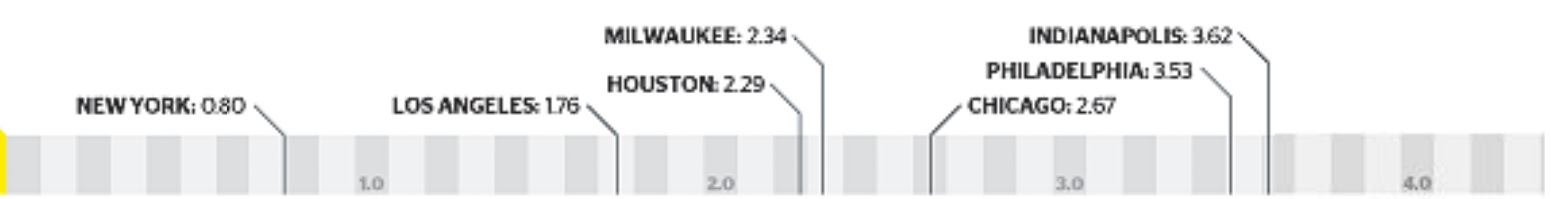

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
1.53 million

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

Philadelphia has seen a rise in its annual homicide totals since 2009, when it recorded 302 killings, according to statistics from phillypolice.com. The city saw 331 homicides in 2012, a 2 percent increase from 2011. This year has seen a change: Homicides are down 38 percent in the first three months of 2013 compared with the same period in 2012.

March, down from 52 homicides in March 2012, RedEye data shows. Chicago also saw a record-low number of killings in February.

Mayor Emanuel and Police Superintendent Garry McCarthy in early April touted a decrease in homicides in February and March but said there still was more work to do.

RedEye compared Chicago's homicide rates to the four other largest U.S. cities in terms of population and five other large Midwestern cities.

FIVE LARGE CITIES PICKED TO REPRESENT STATES IN THE MIDWEST

6. DETROIT

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
706,585

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

Detroit recorded 386 criminal homicides in 2012, a 12 percent increase from 2011, according to the Detroit Police Department. Separately, Detroit recorded 25 homicides last year that were deemed justifiable, which includes police-involved shootings and killings in self-defense. The city saw 308 criminal homicides in 2010 and 392 in 2007.

7. INDIANAPOLIS

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
827,609

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

Indianapolis saw 96 criminal homicides in 2012, the same number as in 2011, the Indianapolis Police Department said. The city also recorded 13 justifiable homicides in 2012 and 12 justifiable homicides in 2011, which include police-involved shootings and killings in self-defense. Indianapolis recorded 35 homicides including five justifiable homicides in the first three months of this year compared with 25 homicides during the same period last year, police said.

8. KANSAS CITY

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
463,202

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

Kansas City logged 108 homicides in 2012, down 5.2 percent compared with 2011, according to the Kansas City Police Department. The city saw 127 homicides in 2005 and 87 killings in 2002, the Kansas City Star reported. There were six fewer homicides in the first three months of this year compared with the same period in 2012, police statistics show.

9. MILWAUKEE

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
597,867

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

There were 92 homicides in 2012, a 5.7 percent increase over 2011, according to the Milwaukee Police Department. There were 105 homicides in 2007. The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel reported 14 homicides in the first three months of this year compared with 21 homicides in the same period of 2012.

10. ST. LOUIS

2011 U.S. Census estimated population:
318,069

Homicides from Jan. 1 through March 31, 2013:

St. Louis saw 113 homicides in 2012, the same number as in 2011. The St. Louis police department also told RedEye it recorded the same number of homicides, 26, in the first three months of this year as it did last year.

WAITING FOR JUSTICE

3 YEARS AFTER ATTACK, FAMILY STILL AWAITS TRIAL

Liam and Sheila McShane attend a fundraiser at the Irish American Heritage Center in 2010. E. JASON WAMBSGANS/TRIBUNE FILE

Chicago Tribune

Three years after his daughter was brutally attacked on a Chicago street, people approach Liam McShane in his hometown in Northern Ireland and ask him about the court case. Is there an update?

McShane is never sure what to say. The case hasn't gone to trial. He doesn't understand why it has taken so long. And he has no answers for the people who ask.

"If the trial was over, you could say so, and try and move on," he said by phone from his home in Silverbridge, County Armagh. But years have passed, with no news. "As it goes on, I thought there's no point in me getting frustrated."

And so he focuses on Natasha, his brown-eyed daughter who once was a gifted artist and talented student with dreams of a career in urban planning. Now, at 26 years old, she is in a wheelchair. She can no longer speak or walk. Liam McShane spends much of his time caring for her.

Do you want a blanket? Do you want the curtains pulled? Do you want a cup of tea?

She can't answer, and so he watches her face for some sign of what she wants.

"The years slip by," he said. "We say a prayer for her all the time. That's all that's left, isn't it?"

Tuesday will mark the third anniversary of the day Natasha McShane and her friend Stacy Jurich were attacked in Bucktown by a bat-wielding mugger who bashed their heads and snatched their purses. Shortly after the attack, authorities arrested Heriberto Viramontes, 34, who was accused of the mugging, and Marcy Cruz, 28, who allegedly waited in a van and smoked marijuana during the attack.

Despite the swift arrests, the case has been mired in delays, as attorneys have wrangled over the admissibility of DNA evidence and other issues.

All the while, the McShanes cling to even the smallest sign that Natasha might recover. A sound she can murmur. A glimmer in her eye. And they wait for the American legal system.

Liam McShane doesn't want to criticize prosecutors. "They be doing their job," he said. But he wonders: "Is it normal to take that long?"

Natasha's grandmother Bernadette McShane is quicker to show her frustration.

"It's very, very disheartening to see the way she's been left after three years," she said. "What is more disheartening is the way the legal system is dragging its heels in bringing this case to closure."

WHY SO LONG?

According to standards set by Cook County criminal courts, most cases, even complex ones, should be completed within two years. But Sally Daly, a spokeswoman for the state's attorney, said that three years "is not an extreme length of time when you compare it to other serious felony cases." The McShane case is complicated by the fact that there are two defendants and two defense attorneys.

Rescuers struggle to reach quake victims

1 Rescuers struggled to reach a remote, rural corner of southwestern China on Sunday as the toll of the dead and missing from the country's worst earthquake in three years climbed to 208 with almost 1,000 serious injuries. The 6.6 magnitude quake struck Saturday.

Jay-Z to sell stake in Brooklyn Nets

4 After helping the Brooklyn Nets relocate from New Jersey to his hometown borough this season, Jay-Z announced Friday that he will be selling his 15 percent stake in the pro basketball team. Earlier this month, he launched Roc Nation Sports, a joint-venture sports management agency with Creative Arts Agency.

Fertilizer company flouted rules

5 The fertilizer plant that exploded Wednesday, obliterating part of a small Texas town and killing at least 14 people, had last year been storing 1,350 times the amount of ammonium nitrate that normally would trigger safety oversight by the Department of Homeland Security.

Yet a person familiar with DHS operations said the company that owns the plant, West Fertilizer, did not tell the agency about the potentially explosive fertilizer as it is required to do, leaving one of the principal regulators of ammonium nitrate—which also can be used to make bombs—unaware of any danger.

Fertilizer plants and depots must report to the DHS when they hold 400 pounds or more of the substance. Filings this year with the Texas Department of State Health Services, which weren't shared with DHS, show the plant had 270 tons of it on hand last year.

A U.S. congressman and several safety experts called into question Friday whether incomplete disclosure or regulatory gridlock may have contributed to the disaster.

"It seems this manufacturer was willfully off the grid," Rep. Bennie Thompson (D-Miss.), ranking member of the House Committee on Homeland Security, said in a statement. "This facility was known to have chemicals well above the threshold amount to be regulated under the Chemical Facility Anti-Terrorism Standards Act, yet we understand that DHS did not even know the plant existed until it blew up."

FINDING HOPE IN PRAYER
Hundreds of West, Texas, residents sought healing at church services Sunday, as one school was preparing to reopen and authorities located the center but not the cause of last week's deadly fertilizer plant blast. About 200 people packed into the Church of the Assumption in the center of town for Catholic mass.

Company officials did not return calls seeking comment on its handling of chemicals and reporting practices. Late Friday, plant owner Donald Adair released a general statement expressing sorrow over the incident but saying West Fertilizer would have little further comment while it cooperated with investigators.

Record number of dead bodies found

7 The bodies of at least 566 people who were killed over a six-day period across Syria were found Sunday, according to Local Coordination Committees in Syria, an opposition group based in the country.

That is the highest number of victims discovered in a single day since the war began in March 2011, according to LCCS spokeswoman Rafif Jouejati.

At least 450 bodies were found in the Damascus suburb of Jadidat al-Fadel, LCCS activist Abu Aasy said.

Over the past six days, some 3,000 members of the security forces stormed the area, and the dead include at least 300 civilians and 150 members from the Free Syrian Army, he said.

Also on Sunday, Secretary of State John Kerry said the U.S. would double its nonlethal aid to opposition forces in Syria to $250 million and that foreign backers had agreed to channel all future assistance through the rebels' Supreme Military Council.

Kerry stopped short of a U.S. pledge to supply weapons to insurgents fighting to overthrow Syrian President Bashar al-Assad that the rebels have sought.

That's how many years in jail 23 Brazilian police officers each were sentenced to Sunday. The case involved a 1992 prison revolt in which 111 inmates died.

BULLS BACKER?

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar is feeling healthier—and he's definitely feeling Chicago

By Jack M Silverstein
FOR REDEYE

In November 2009, the NBA's all-time leading scorer, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, was diagnosed with chronic myeloid leukemia. Today he teaches new patients how to live with CML. Abdul-Jabbar was in Chicago over the weekend for "Living Well With CML," an event for CML patients. RedEye sat down with the basketball legend Friday to talk about his experience with the disease, as well as his take on Derrick Rose's injury and the Bulls' postseason chances.

JACK M SILVERSTEIN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

Tell me about your experience with CML.
The first person I talked to [about having the disease] was my son. He's a doctor now, but when I was diagnosed he was still in med school. He told me, "You don't know what kind of leukemia you have, so be patient, do what your doctors tell you, and you may be able to be in a position where it's not going to be as life-threatening as you perceive."

When I got diagnosed, it was a very, very scary moment. I got the confirmation from the people who did the blood work on, like, a Thursday. And then I set up my appointment to go to the UCLA oncology on the following Tuesday. So I had a really long weekend where I was getting ready to die [laughs] and all this stuff. I went to UCLA and we found out very quickly that I had CML, and they said, "There's something that can be done to treat it. There's a medication."

[Abdul-Jabbar spent about two years on the first medication, Gleevec, then switched to another medication, Tasinga. Since then, his blood has gotten "more and more healthy" and is now "very healthy."]

What are some of your favorite interactions with other patients?
What makes me feel the best is when I get to interact with kids.

They haven't had a chance to live their lives, and they don't complain. They're like, "Oh, I'm dealing with it." They're just trying to be kids. It really makes you humble. It makes you appreciate the fact that you've had a chance to live your life and do a lot of things. And maybe I wasn't as appreciative of that as I should have been before I was diagnosed.

All the days that you live, all of a sudden, they take on a different status.

> "I haven't seen them play enough. But they absolutely have the horses."

The sports question that's consumed Chicago for about a year now is "When is Derrick coming back?" Is there some angle that is most important that people should consider when debating Rose's return?
I think they should consider Derrick's work ethic. It's superb. Derrick is not the type of guy who wants to be on the sideline. He wants to be on the court. I know that. Just from what I saw, things he said in public, the way he plays the game—he plays for his teammates.

He doesn't care about his stats or anything like that. He wants to win. He's a great citizen. When he won the MVP, the stuff that he said about his mother—every parent wants a kid like Derrick. He's just awesome. So they should understand that it has nothing to do with any character flaws that Derrick has. It's all about his health. And they should approach it like that.

Even if he never plays again, he's been an incredible role model for so many kids for a lot of reasons that kids—I don't even know if they understand what a good person he is. But I can see it. And most people with any insight immediately would be supportive of him.

How can the Bulls beat the Nets?
The Bulls can beat the Nets if they play a really tough defense and their outside shooting is on.

Joakim [Noah] can get them some points in the paint. I made sure that that was going to be part of the scenario. [Abdul-Jabbar worked with Noah over the summer.] His plantar fasciitis is a problem, I hear. But Joakim is another guy—it's not about him wanting to lay down. He wants to play. If he can play, he's going to play—and play his heart out.

What did he want to learn from you?
He wanted to get a deeper understanding of the game. He understood that there were things that he couldn't do, and it was mainly on the offensive end. Defensively, he's got it. But on the offensive end, he wasn't at a point where he could consistently help them over those tough spots when the guys on the outside are being covered real tough.

If that's happening, that means that he's got room in the paint to get some high-percentage shots. Those are the things that get you over those cold spells and makes the defense adjust to what you're doing.

Did you try to sell him on the sky hook?
I just told him, "I want you to score in the paint in a way that's comfortable to you. You don't have to emulate my shot. Whatever you can do in here that works."

He's got a couple of hooks and he's using both hands, which is the one thing I wanted him to do.

So you think the Bulls can beat the Nets?
Oh yeah. As far as I know, it's a toss-up, because I haven't seen them play enough. But they absolutely have the horses.

Do you think NBA players should be allowed to call their own fouls? Would that work?
No. That would never work.

Wouldn't work.
I don't think so.

What is it that you love the most and what is most important about basketball?
I think for me—and this is very selfish—but basketball is a sport for tall people, that we could excel at. It was either that or pitching, and I didn't have Randy Johnson as a role model or I might have tried that.

BULL POWER

WHAT'S BUZZIN' IN THE BULLS' WORLD

The D-Rose dance
Tom Thibodeau moved the closest to declaring Derrick Rose out for the season Saturday when the coach said the Bulls star is "most likely out." "But you never know," Thibodeau said. "The playoffs are stretched out, too, so you have to factor that in. Who knows another week from now where he is? You always want to leave that possibility open." Ugh.

Good to go
Kirk Hinrich said his bruised left thigh was sore but manageable and Thibodeau said Joakim Noah felt "pretty good" Sunday after a team meeting and film session at a midtown Manhattan hotel. Both Hinrich and Noah will play in Monday's Game 2.

Going home
Taj Gibson is a little stunned to be playing playoff basketball in his old Brooklyn neighborhood. "It's all kind of crazy and surreal to be back here," Gibson told the Tribune. "I'm just trying to focus on getting wins against the Nets."

1 The Bulls are down 1-0 in their playoff series. How nervous are you?	Same as at the beginning of the season: No Rose with the ball. Bulls will take a fall.	About as nervous as the E! execs who greenlit "What Would Ryan Lochte Do?"	Too depressed/despondent/dismayed to be nervous.	Very! My role in Game 2 is the same as the Bulls' best player: sit and watch.	I live in the car alarm capital of Canada. I'm always nervous. It's the urban version of the cricket.
2 How did the Bulls greet C.J. Watson and Keith Bogans this weekend?	Like any of us would greet an ex-girlfriend: beg them to come back. Paaa-leeeze!!!	Humble pleas for mercy.	With a trail of Reese's Pieces that led to the Bulls' locker room. Hey, it worked for E.T.!	Like a doormat. Let them run all over and then said "welcome" afterward.	Fun Fact: Alex Burrows became a huge fan of Watson after the NBA nailed him for flopping.
3 The Hawks should focus on ___ their last few games of the regular season.	Knocking the crap out of the Canucks! Lets have a Sedin Sandwich for din-din!	Getting Derrick Rose healthy. (At this point it's a citywide job.)	Those playoff beards. I'm ready for the beard-off challenge!	Getting in a few good shaves. Beards till late June!	Asking the Canucks if they wouldn't mind popping the Presidents' Trophy in the mail.
4 The Vancouver Canucks' motto this season is "our team, our way." Discuss.	Being a Canuck means two things: You're a meathead and a Bryan Adams fan. Enough said.	It's an improvement from their previous "exit early, riot often" motto.	Isn't that what inbred mountain people say? Same difference.	Sounds like a Burger King commercial. And isn't that where Luongo will be working soon?	Fun Fact 2: When Luongo still had the starter gig, it was called "our team, totally your way."
5 What was Robbie Gould thinking when the Bears signed another kicker?	"I make how much a year to kick a ball? CRAZY!"	"Oh good, someone to carry my equipment around for me ... 'cause I'm a BOSS."	He's had "There's a New Kid in Town" by the Eagles on continuous play on his iPod.	Like a kick to the pants. And it's no good.	That this is the first step toward the eventual retirement of Jim McMahon's jersey?

Standing with Boston

From Beantown to London, the sports world honored the city's victims

Runners observe a moment of silence before the start of the London Marathon on Sunday. REUTERS

LONDON Undaunted by the Boston Marathon bombings, big crowds lined the route of London's mass road race Sunday to cheer on about 36,000 runners, many of whom wore black ribbons to honor the dead and wounded.

Hundreds of extra police were deployed to secure the first race in the World Marathon Majors series since two explosions near the finish line of the Boston Marathon on Monday killed three people and wounded 176.

Before the start of the men's elite and mass races, official commentator Geoff Wightman led the crowd in a tribute to Boston.

"This week the world marathon family was shocked and saddened by the events at the Boston Marathon," he said over loudspeakers. "In a few moments, a whistle will sound and we will join together in silence to remember our friends and colleagues for whom a day of joy turned into a day of sadness."

The packed ranks of competitors bowed their heads and stood silently for 30 seconds, then clapped and cheered when a second whistle marked the end of the tribute.

One spectator held up a placard that read "Come on London, do it for Boston!" while some runners had the name of the U.S. city emblazoned on their vests, but despite these somber reminders, the mood was overwhelmingly one of celebration.

Small children reached out to high-five runners as they went past, spectators cheered elite and anonymous runners with equal enthusiasm, and a brass band near the starting line jokingly complained that the boisterous crowds were drowning out their music.

"It was incredible, the amount of support, people coming out from everywhere, just cheering the whole way. Unbelievable," said Mo Farah, Britain's 5,000- and 10,000-meter Olympic champion, after running the first half of the course to prepare for competing next year.

> "This is our [bleeping] city and nobody is going to dictate our freedom."
> —Red Sox slugger David Ortiz, addressing Fenway Park fans Saturday in the team's first game in Boston since the bombings

How's that, Hossa?

It was just a year ago that Blackhawks winger Marian Hossa was sitting in a dark room wondering if he would play again after suffering a severe concussion in the playoffs. How things have improved. Hossa was nominated Friday for the Bill Masterton Trophy by the Chicago chapter of the Professional Hockey Writers Association. The Masterton is awarded for perseverance, sportsmanship and dedication to the sport.

Injustice: Gods Among Us
PlayStation 3, Wii U, Xbox 360

Holy hostility, Batman! It might be strange to see Superman become a super-fascist in NetherRealm Studio's new DC Comics-themed follow-up to "Mortal Kombat," but the compelling story mode is only an appetizer in "Injustice: Gods Among Us." It's a clever excuse to set up a series of unlikely clashes between heroes (Wonder Woman vs. Green Lantern) and villains (The Joker vs. Lex Luthor).

The meat of the game is the spectacular one-on-one battles themselves, which feel like an evolution of "Mortal Kombat." There's an emphasis this time on simplifying things for button-mashing newbies with three basic combat buttons instead of four and easy-to-use super moves. However, NetherRealm was smart enough to add an extra layer of depth for those who are hard-core enough to want to pull off 10-hit combos.

The action isn't quite as smooth as I expected, but this still likely is the best fighter you'll play all year.

Chicago company switches up DC Comics with 'Injustice' game

By Ryan Smith
FOR REDEYE

Superman goes super-berserk in the opening sequence of the DC Comics-centric video game "Injustice: Gods Among Us." After learning the Joker has tricked him into murdering a pregnant Lois Lane and setting off a bomb that's destroyed the entire city of Metropolis, he's out for vengeance.

As Batman tries to stop him, Superman punches through Joker's chest and kills him—setting off a civil war between the two superheores and the rest of the DC universe.

"It's a scene that lets you know that this is not a normal story and it's kind of our take of this universe," said "Injustice" producer Hector Sanchez. "DC gave us almost complete freedom and said, 'You guys can make the characters and the story as badass as you want.' "

If you thought Christopher Nolan's Batman movies were dark, wait until you see NetherRealm Studios' twisted take on the Caped Crusader and friends. The Avondale-based studio, long famous for giving us the uber-violent beat-'em-up "Mortal Kombat" series, has created a new button-mashing fighting game with a backstory that blurs the line between good guy and bad guy.

> "It's a hard-hitting fighting game, but we're not going to rip off Wonder Woman's head or anything."
> —Hector Sanchez

Following his murder of the Joker, Superman and a few other Justice League members decide to rule over Earth as dictators because they believe humans are no longer fit to govern themselves. Batman and a group of rebels, meanwhile, take a stand against the new regime and try to free Earth from the tyranny of the Man of Steel.

"The premise is: What if these people we've revered as saviors of mankind—Superman and Wonder Woman," Sanchez said. "What happens if they were the bad guys? How would our world be? That's the core of 'Injustice.' "

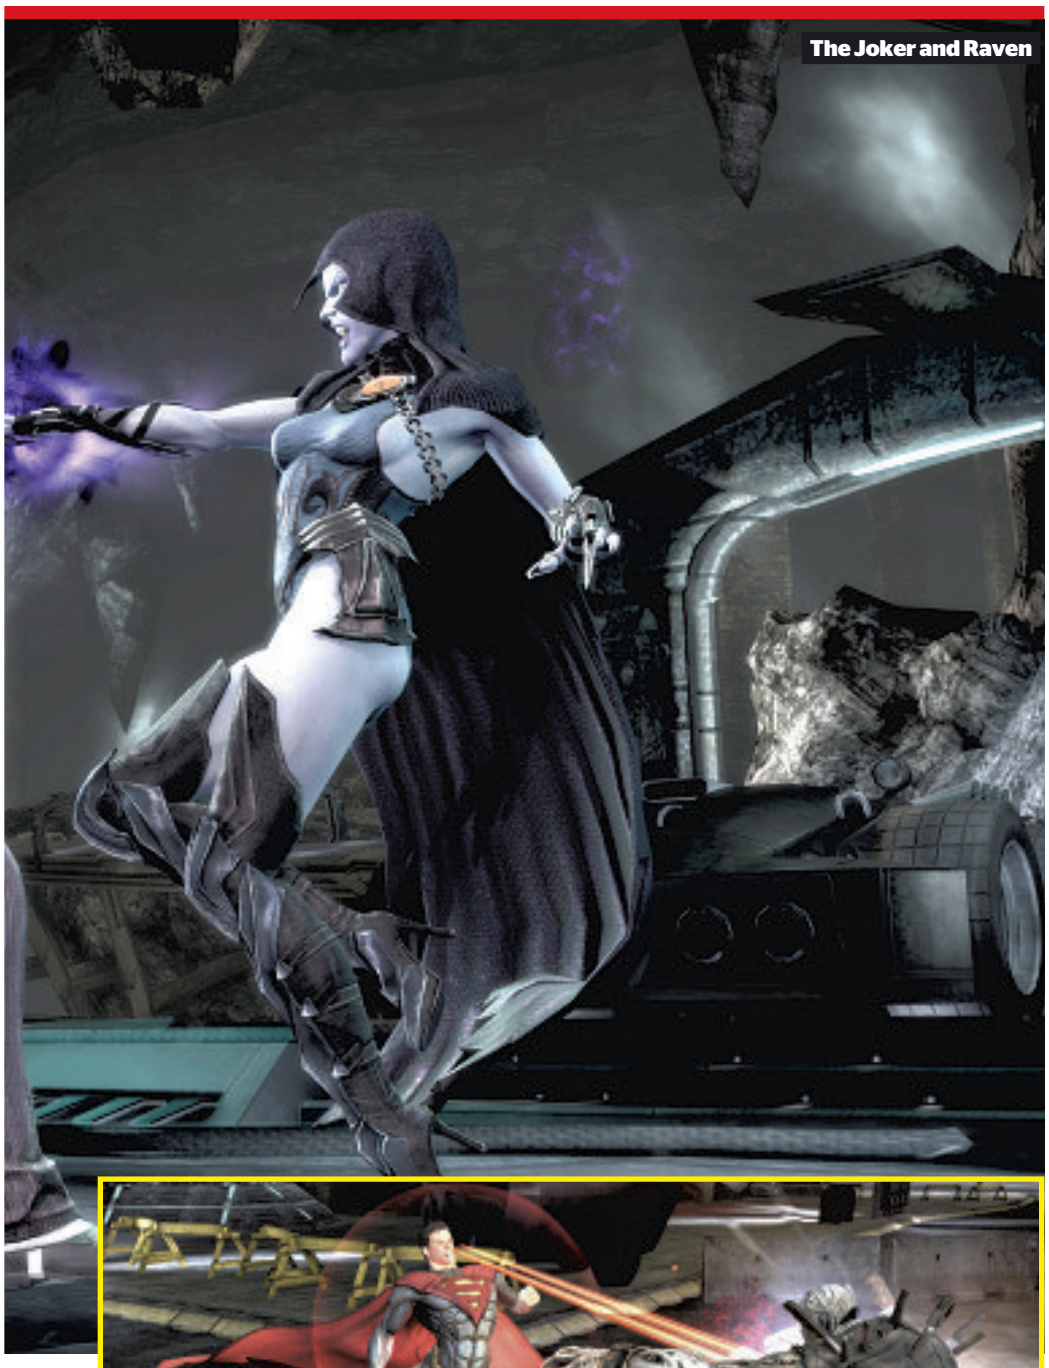

It's a story that intrigued DC Comics so much the publisher teased the video game's April 16 release with its own 12-part comic book prequel to "Injustice." The comic has topped sales in the past few weeks, and the game is expected to follow suit.

"I think it was refreshing for DC because it's a brand new, darker take on their characters," Sanchez said, "and for us it was nice to do something outside of 'Mortal Kombat.' "

At least a few of the 90 or so NetherRealm Studios staffers have worked on some version of "Mortal Kombat" for most of the last two decades. After finishing the ninth game in the series in 2011, Ed Boon, who co-created the series in 1992 when the studio was part of now-defunct Midway Games, decided to go in a different direction for the next title.

Because they had worked with DC Comics characters before on "Mortal Kombat vs. DC Universe," a crossover fighting game developed in 2008, it made sense for NetherRealm to try its hand at a full DC game.

"There was a little bit of serendipity involved, where we're fully owned by Warner Bros. and DC is a sister organization, so it made sense to give us access to these characters," Sanchez said.

For the past two years, NetherRealm has been hard at work on a game that would be a compromise between the spine-ripping gore of "Mortal Kombat" and the oft family-friendly vibe of the comics.

The game has earned a "Teen" rating for its violence, which shows a little blood and involves over-the-top special moves like Superman grabbing an opponent and flying him out of the Earth's atmosphere, only to slam him back to the ground.

"It's a hard-hitting fighting game, but we're not going to rip off Wonder Woman's head or anything," Sanchez said. "It's not our place to do anything like that."

Rectify
8 p.m. Monday,
Sundance Channel
Episodes also air beginning Sunday on AMC after "Mad Men"

In the second hour of Sundance Channel's incredibly absorbing new series "Rectify," Daniel Holden takes off his shoes and socks in the outfield of a baseball diamond.

He revels at the feel of grass between his toes and the sun on his face, two sensations he hadn't experienced in the 19 years he spent on death row.

"I'm not sure what to think of this ... drastic change of course in my life," Daniel says in an earlier scene. "I'm certainly not against it."

Thankfully, creator and writer Ray McKinnon, Sundance and the producing team behind "Breaking Bad" weren't against letting viewers see Daniel's every new discovery, conflicted emotion and painful memory as he tries to adjust to a world he hasn't seen since he was 18.

Aden Young delivers an extraordinary performance as Daniel, who is released from prison when new DNA evidence is used to overturn his conviction for the rape and murder of his then-17-year-old girlfriend. In riveting close-ups, Young shares both Daniel's wonder at the world and the shock to his prison-dulled senses. It's easy to understand how Daniel sometimes misses the solitude of death row.

McKinnon has said he was inspired by a series of Illinois death sentences that were overturned by DNA evidence a decade ago, but "Rectify" isn't a simple political statement. It's a powerful, emotionally engaging character study.

The six-hour series takes place over the first seven days of Daniel's freedom as he struggles to be more than an outsider to his family or his hometown of Paulie, Ga.

A lot of people still believe he's guilty, including Roland Foulkes (Michael O'Neill), the one-time prosecutor who rode the Holden case to the state Senate. He is just as devoted to seeing Daniel go back to prison as Daniel's sister, Amantha (Abigail Spencer), and his new lawyer, Jon Stern (Luke Kirby), are to keeping him free.

Because "Rectify" moves so slowly, it isn't for everyone. But the deliberate pacing plays into the idea that Daniel, who on death row contemplated "the time in between the seconds," now has all the time in the world.

The nagging questions of who really killed Hannah Dean and why Daniel confessed in the first place add to the simmering tension, but the real beauty of "Rectify" is its unwavering look into Daniel's psyche.

Vote on Amazon's next original series

Los Angeles Times

Online retailing giant Amazon is following Netflix and Hulu into the world of original online content. But unlike the other outlets, which have been selecting their programs the old-fashioned way (that is, executives putting their reps on the line to back a show), Amazon is going about things a little differently: It's asking viewers to vote on which shows will become full series.

Call it the "American Idol"-ization of entertainment programming, but Amazon is letting the people be their own programming execs by putting 14 pilot episodes on its website and then letting the audience choose which should move forward.

Of the shows that could become series, there's John Goodman in a congressional series from "Doonesbury" creator Garry Trudeau; "Browsers," about young people working at a news website from "Daily Show" writer David Javerbaum and starring Bebe Neuwirth; "Betas," about four friends trying to strike it rich in Silicon Valley; "Onion News Empire," about a team of wacky news-gatherers; the high school teacher comedy "Those Who Can't"; "Zombieland," based on the movie; and the animated series "Dark Minions" and "Supanatural."

Kids' shows include an Oz-set series called "Positively Oztively," "Sara Solves It," "Creative Galaxy," "Teeny Tiny Dogs," "Tumbleaf" and the partly live-action "Annebots."

You can see them all at amazonoriginals.com. All the shows went on the site Friday.

Those who think they can game the system by voting for one show several times should think again. According to Deadline, Amazon executives won't just be looking to how many people "liked" a particular show. They're also looking at how many people watched the whole thing and how many people shared it on social media.

Additionally, focus groups are being recruited to discuss the episodes.

While it's unclear how many of the pilots will be chosen to become full series, it's a new way of looking at the TV business, which traditionally has kept unused pilots unseen and hidden from the public.

Wiig on life after 'SNL'

Los Angeles Times

Kristen Wiig says she felt "a little lost" after leaving "Saturday Night Live" to pursue other endeavors.

Wiig, 39, exited the show in May after an emotional waltz with Mick Jagger and send-off from Jon Hamm. And about a year after her departure, our favorite Target lady is opening up about adjusting to living post-"SNL."

"The show was seven years of my life and a six-day work week, and you're constantly with your friends all day, all night," she told Access Hollywood at CinemaCon in Las Vegas last week.

"You sort of live and breathe the show," she added. "Then, when it's over, you kind of feel a little lost ... It was definitely an adjustment—even just the hours and [no longer] being in New York."

Kristen Wiig

> "Then, when it's over, you kind of feel a little lost ..."

Wiig reached mega-success with 2011's hit "Bridesmaids," which she co-wrote and starred in, and the raunchy comedy went on to be nominated for two Oscars. Most thought that was the reason she decided to leave the variety show, but she said she always knew her years there were numbered.

"I just always knew it was going to be seven and that was it," Wiig said in the August 2012 issue of Marie Claire. "I think maybe if I were 22, I could see myself staying a little bit, but it just felt like the right time."

She's taken on quite a few movie projects since, including "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" with Ben Stiller, which she was promoting at CinemaCon, and the highly anticipated sequel "Anchorman: The Legend Continues" with Will Ferrell.

"I'm leaving in a few days to go film that. I'm so excited!" she said. "I hope I can get through the scenes without ruining it by laughing!"

HEY CHICAGO, DO YOU KNOW A GREAT VOLUNTEER?

Direct Energy and Tribune Media Group proudly present the 1st Annual Chicago Volunteer Citizen of the Year Award, which recognizes those that go above and beyond to help others in the community.

Nominations are open to all residents in Chicagoland, with the award going to the person that most exemplifies the volunteer spirit. As a way to honor their service they will receive a $1,000 cash prize from Direct Energy and an additional $5,000 donation will be awarded in their name to a community organization of their choice.

Submitting a nomination is easy. Just visit: directenergy.com/vcoy-chicago and nominate the ones who do so much for our community.

Nominations close Sunday April 28, 2013.

Looking for Hemophilia Patients and Hemophilia Caregivers

A local marketing research firm is conducting a one time, 45 minute individual interview near O'Hare among men and women ages 12-65 who have been diagnosed with Hemophilia. The purpose of this study is to gain insight and learn about your experiences.

Qualified respondents will receive a generous cash incentive for participation in the study. You must first call and submit to a brief screening to determine if you meet the qualifications of our client. The research will be conducted April 23rd & April 24th at various times. If you are interested in participating and would like to see if you qualify, please contact Fieldwork O'Hare at 773-714-8701 and ask for Hillary.

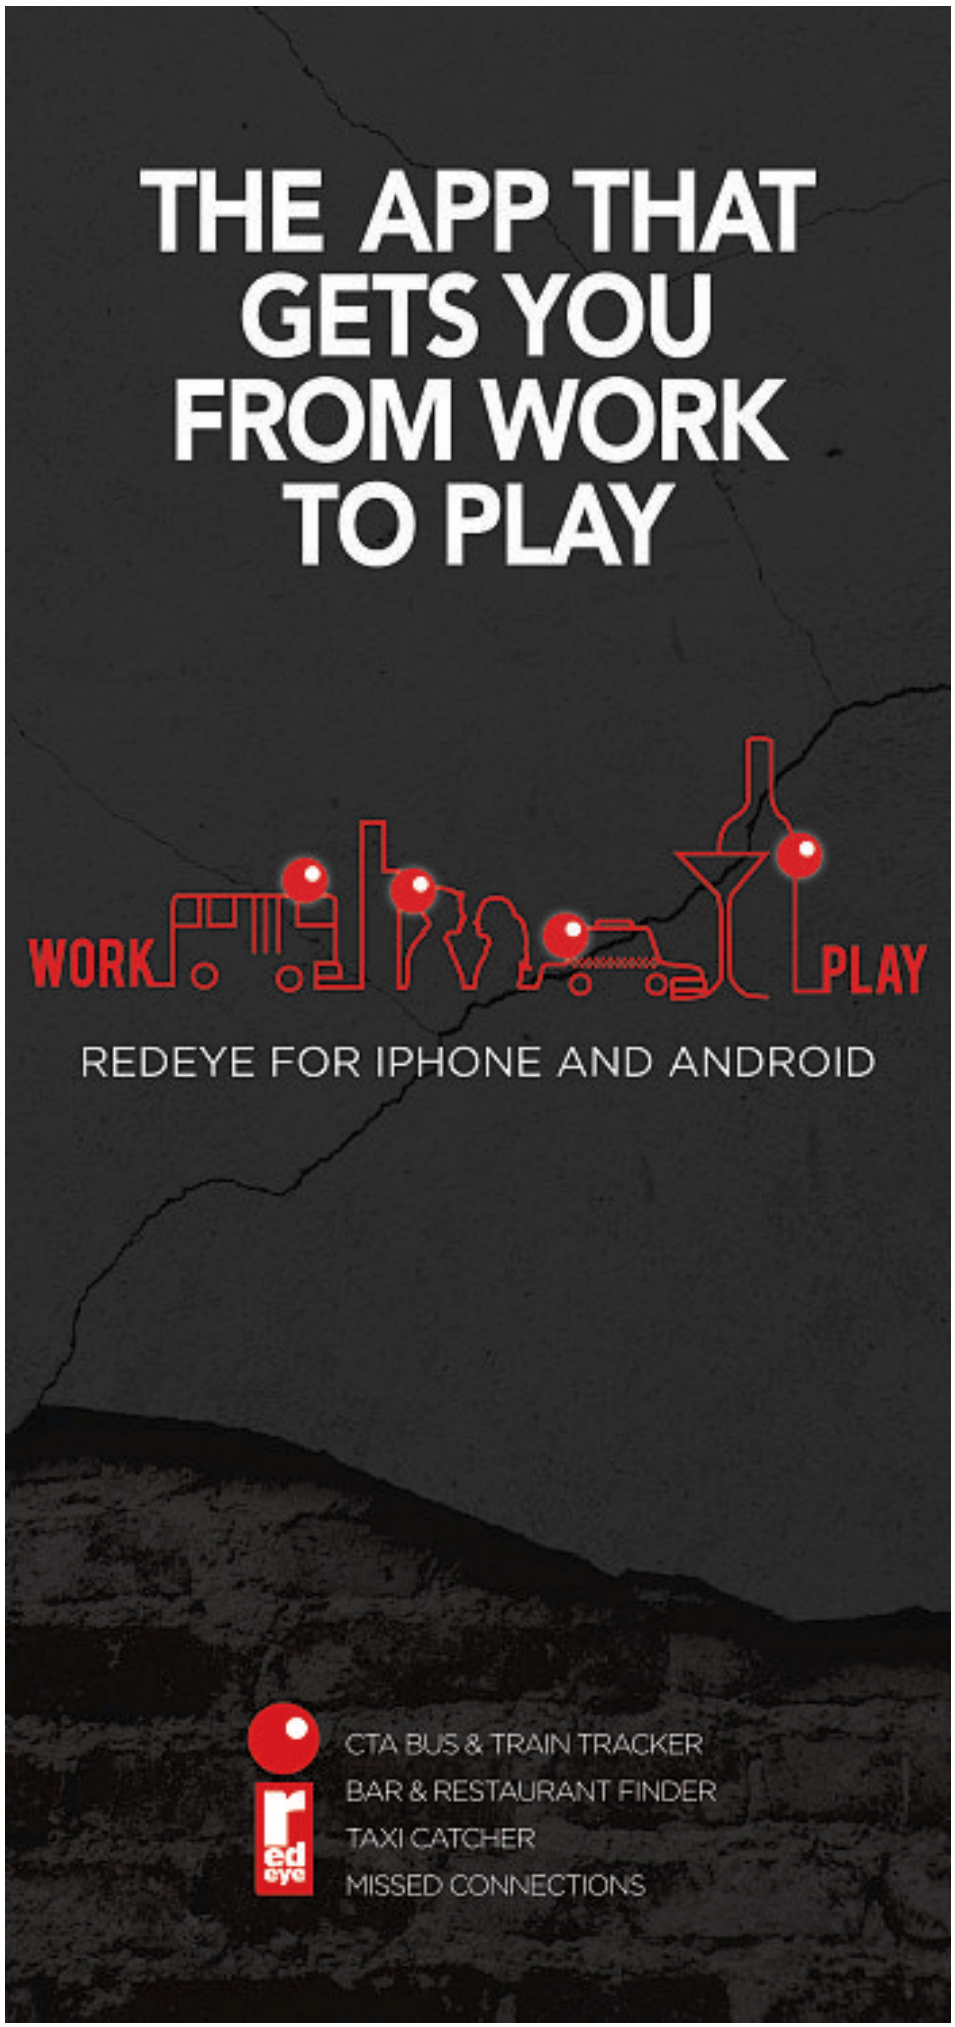

Proof of diagnosis and a state issued ID/driver's license will be required in order to participate. If this isn't a good fit for you but you'd like to be a part of future studies, call us and register at 773-714-8701 or visit us online at www.fieldwork.com. Select the Chicago O'Hare location and click join our database.

Fitbit tracks activity, sleep

MCT

If you're looking for a fitness gadget that's actually easy to use, check out the Fitbit One. It's a wireless device that tracks the usual stats such as calories burned, distance traveled and steps taken. But it also has a bonus sleep monitor to measure quantity and quality of sleep. All stats can be wirelessly synced to PCs, Macs and select smartphones as well as tracked with the included Fitbit mobile app.

The One employs the newest smart technology to ensure accurate measurement, using a 3-axis accelerometer to track movement both during the day and at night. The device offers six modes: step, distance, calories burned, floors climbed, activity tracker and clock. It includes a holder clip, wireless sync device, charging cord, free fitbit.com membership and sleep wristband that functions as a vibrating alarm. The One tracking device is extremely portable, weighing just .28 ounces. It's available in black and burgundy.

Fitbit One
$99.95 at fitbit.com and retailers such as Apple, Radio Shack and Best Buy

2 MORE FITNESS GADGETS

Motoactv
$239.79—$334.99
at amazon.com (1)
This GPS/MP3 player/calorie counter holds eight to 16 gigabytes of music and claims to learn which songs motivate you the most. The GPS tracks everything from the distance you run or walk to your speed and calories burned. Motoactv is Bluetooth-friendly and Wi-Fi-compatible.

Nike+ FuelBand
$149 at store.nike.com
(2) Like the Fitbit One, the Nike+ FuelBand tracks your calories and progress and uploads the info to Nike+ Connect and the free iPhone app. Unlike Fitbit, however, the FuelBand essentially acts as a life coach, sending you alarms throughout the day when you have or haven't reached your daily "NikeFuel" goals.

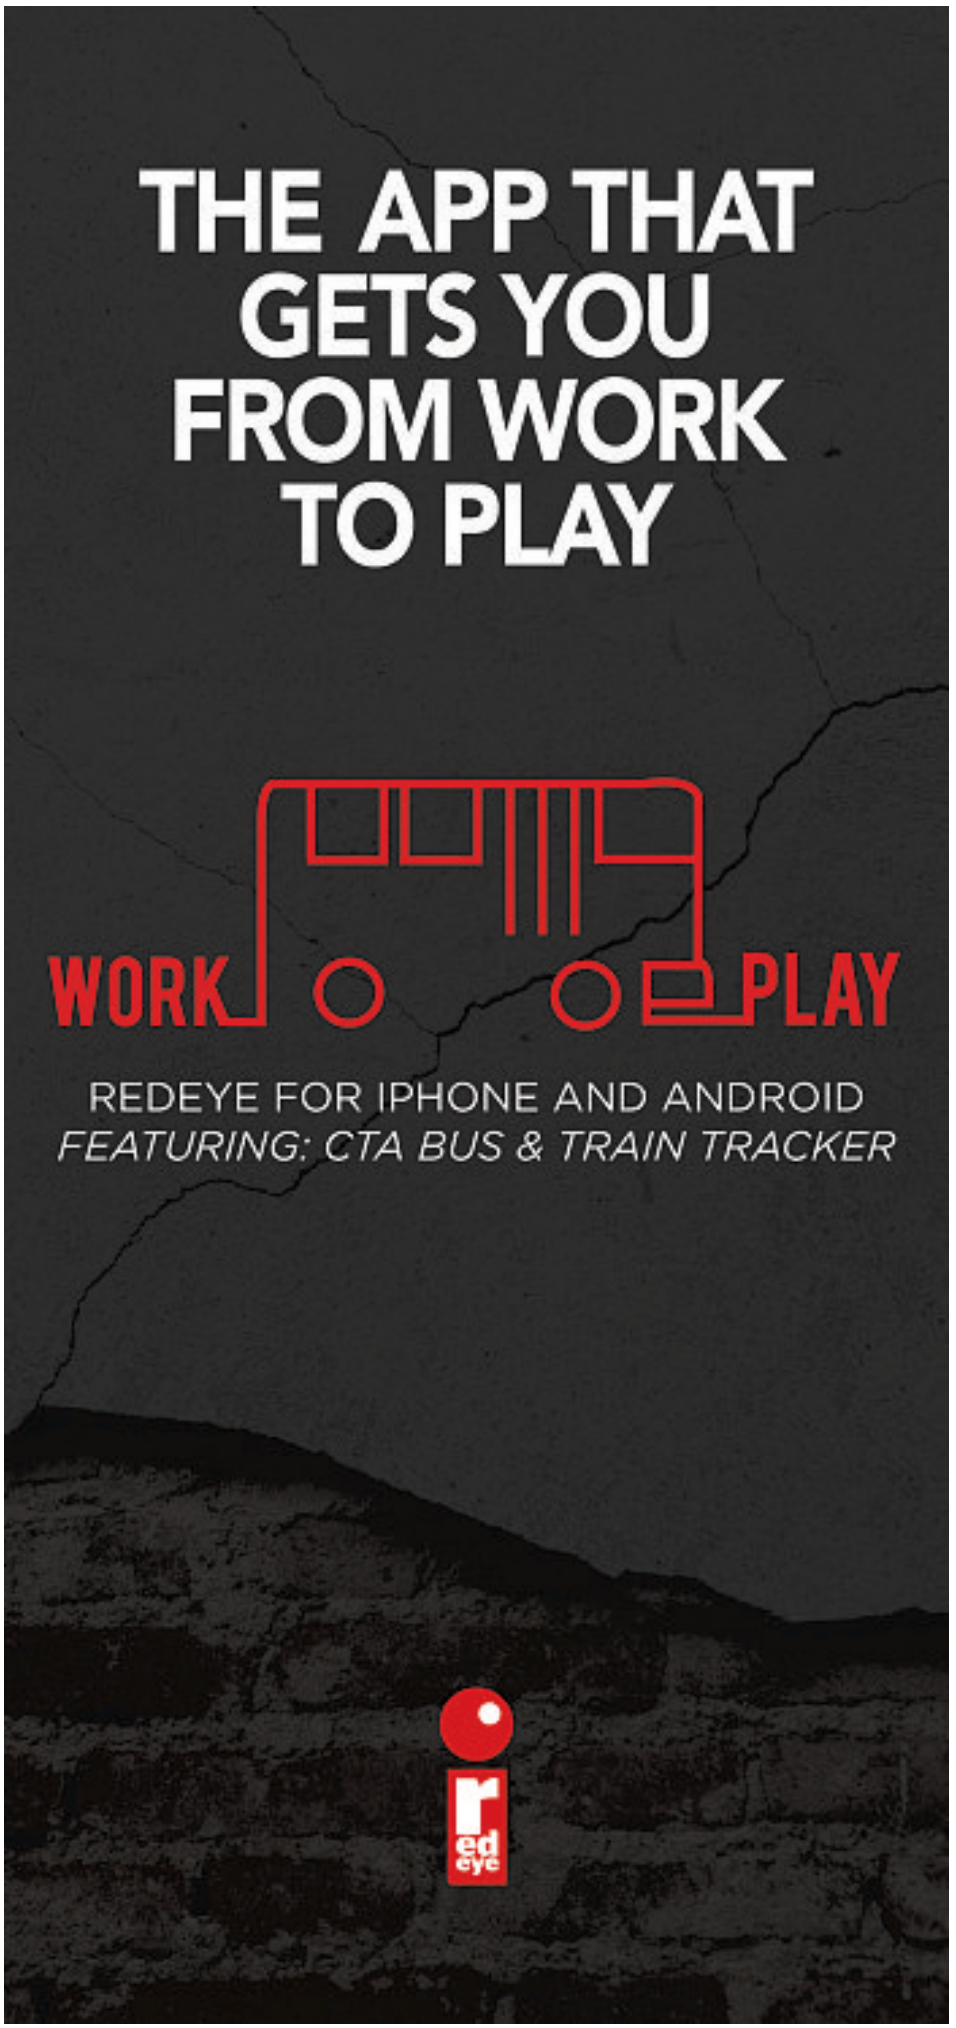

AQUINAS LITERACY CENTER

Become a volunteer English as a Second Language tutor at Aquinas Literacy Center!

horoscope

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Taurus April 20-May 20
Mars is making you pushy. If you just started dating someone and you haven't seen each other naked, you'll insist on getting down to business. If you're in a relationship, you'll demand that things move to the next level.

Gemini May 21-June 21
A friendly moon is filling you with creative ideas. You'll realize that your romantic life has become boring and predictable. You'll come up with your own inventive way of bringing magic into the bedroom.

Cancer June 22-July 22
You're being a drama queen. "Why don't you spend more time with me?" "Why are you still texting your ex?" The full moon is trying to remind you that a relationship isn't just about you.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
You're broadening your horizons, thanks to Mercury. If you usually hang out at the same bar when you're trying to meet people, you'll venture into a different setting.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
The sun is inspiring you to approach love like it's a business. If your current relationship contract doesn't offer favorable terms, you'll want to renegotiate.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
You're ready to start something new. If you're in a relationship, you'll find ways to make things more interesting. The moon is helping you have fun.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
The moon is revealing the flaws in your relationship. How did you end up dating a Republican when you're a tried-and-true Democrat?

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
A sexy moon is helping you access the powers of your inner performer. You'll want to wear revealing clothes and put yourself in a setting where people will take notice.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan.19
Venus is making you a perfectionist. If your partner never cleans the house or pays his or her share of the bills, you'll want to complain about this.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
You'll enjoy some sexy banter with someone who turns you on mentally. Air signs like you connect with people through the head before you connect via the heart. The moon is reminding you how fun it is to share flirty ideas with someone who is as intelligent as you.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
Avoid hidden agendas. If you want something, speak up. The moon is showing you that honesty is the best policy.

Aries March 21-April 19
A moon opposition is enhancing your ego. Even if you're dating a supermodel or an NFL player, you're convinced that you can do better. This delusion soon will pass.

TODAY IN THE YEAR ...

1992: In Guadalajara, Mexico, more than 200 people were killed by a series of sewer explosions.
2005: Zacarias Moussaoui pleaded guilty in a federal courtroom outside Washington to conspiring with the Sept. 11 hijackers to kill Americans.
2008: Hillary Clinton won the Pennsylvania Democratic primary, defeating Barack Obama and keeping her presidential hopes alive.

Go-go Gaga

Nothing like a River North workout to get an injured diva back on her feet

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» lgomez@tribune.com

» @aboutluisgomez

Lady Gaga is back on her feet, a Pilates studio owner says.

The "Poker Face" singer—who has been photographed getting around in a wheelchair since canceling her world tour in February to undergo hip surgery—worked out April 11 at Reform Chicago in River North, owner Corinne Clifton said.

"[Her people] emailed us and asked if they could rent out the studio," Clifton said "I told them we don't rent out the studio, and they came back and said 'Can you do it for a VIP?' I thought about it and was like, 'OK, it depends on who it is.'"

Clifton eventually learned it was for Gaga, and scheduled her for private lessons at the non-traditional Pilates studio April 9 and 11. Gaga didn't show April 9, but her security guards did to check out the studio. They returned with Gaga two days later.

"It was myself and another trainer in the studio with [Gaga] and her personal assistant," Clifton said. "She seems to be in good health. She was walking around totally fine. But her range is limited on her right side. She didn't seem to be in pain, but we were also going really slow. I felt like she could have done more, maybe, but we also didn't want to push her the first time."

Those hoping Gaga's workout attire that day was as outrageous as many of the other unique outfits she's been seen in will be sorely disappointed.

"She was in black stretch pants and a black T-shirt," Clifton said of Gaga, who visits Chicago often because her boyfriend, Taylor Kinney, is shooting NBC's "Chicago Fire" here. "Not a lot of makeup. She's very pretty and in great shape."

REDEYE ILLUSTRATION

THEY'RE THROUGH!

Our long national nightmare is over. Kim Kardashian and Kris Humphries have settled their divorce, Reuters reports, thus avoiding a loud and messy trial. A divorce settlement has been approved for the couple, according to a statement Friday by Los Angeles County Superior Court. They broke up 72 days after their made-for-TV wedding in August 2011.

Charlize Theron, Darren Criss, Leonardo DiCaprio, Jennifer Lawrence and Drew Barrymore were among the celebs who attended the GLAAD Media Awards on Saturday in L.A., usmagazine.com reports. But the line of the night might have gone to Betty White. "I was going to say I'm GLAAD to be here. But that would be corny," she said. "But when have I ever missed a chance to be corny? I'm GLAAD to be here."

Illegally blonde

Oh, this isn't good. Reese Witherspoon and her husband were arrested Friday in Atlanta, variety.com reports. Toth was charged with driving under the influence, police said, while Witherspoon was charged with disorderly conduct after refusing an officer's orders to stay in the car. The couple was released on bond.

HOT DATE

MAY 4

That's the date of a casting call for Season 15 of NBC's weight-loss competition, "The Biggest Loser." It's set for 10 a.m.-6 p.m. at Planet Fitness, 3120 N. Pulaski Road. Visit thebiggestlosercasting.com for details.

That's not luck

How badly did Daft Punk's fans miss the band? So much so that the French duo's first single off the new album, "Get Lucky," set the single-day streaming record on Spotify, thr.com reports. The full album, "Random Access Memories," is due out May 21.

THE DIGIT

Michelle Williams is prepping her fourth album and first since 2008, to be released this summer, she told billboard.com. She does not yet have a title.

Cruise control

After suffering a couple of box-office disappointments, Tom Cruise has rocketed to his first No. 1 film opening in years with "Oblivion." The sci-fi flick was the only new movie to hit theaters this weekend and easily claimed the top spot, debuting with a respectable $38.2 million, according to an estimate from distributor Universal Pictures. The Jackie Robinson biography "42" dropped to second with $18 million.
